Peer Gatter is a political scientist and scholar of Middle Eastern and Islamic Studies with a focus on water politics and the political economy of the Middle East. Following his studies at the Universities of Tübingen, Teheran and Georgetown, he worked as freelance journalist for the German weeklies Die Zeit, Focus and Der Spiegel reporting mostly from Afghanistan, Iran, West Africa and Northern Ireland. Since 1999 he worked for nearly a decade in and on Yemen for the World Bank and UNDP. His portfolio included decentralization, agricultural reform, water & environment, protection of the biodiversity of Socotra Archipelago and the Red Sea, and last but not least, qāt. In 2008, he joined the German development cooperation in Syria and Lebanon where he worked as coordinator of the water sector. In 2010, he returned to Germany and coordinates the Program for Intercultural Relations with Muslim Countries of the German International Cooperation (GIZ).
